"Health supplements market in India is growing & has a lot of potential for the business not only in India but beyond. India can really help replicate what we have done in Pharmaceutical Industry from manufacturing to innovation to packing to ingredients, therefore events like Vitafoods are very critical. It is important that we bring the eco-system together and really propel the supplement industry not only for India but beyond. The experience at Vitafoods India has been very insightful for me if I could say and if I could use the two words I would say it's a wonderful experience."

ARUN MISHRA

Head the global regulatory affairs health & wellbeing,
Hindustan Unilever

"For 23 years I have been participating in expos for natural ingredients from NNFA to Supply Side West and now in Vitafoods India. It is an honor to be here to promote new raw materials, to look for innovations and to make connections and work with raw material suppliers which are based here in this great country. India is known as a great resource for raw materials and there is so much opportunity here for introducing consumers of the 2nd largest country in the world to nutraceutical products. They are very health conscious, and now look at nature 1st for their health solution, so I think it is important for the Indian consumers. Vitafoods in India will help the nutraceutical companies market it properly."
